

2017 Manitoba budget: Arts, sports programs to see big cuts

Minister says funding 'haircut' can be managed by reducing administrative costs

By Kristin Annable, Donna Lee, CBC News Posted: Apr 11, 2017 2:40 PM CT | Last Updated: Apr 11, 2017 9:08 PM CT

The overall budget for sport, culture and heritage programs will decrease from $71.6 million to $68 million. (Gary Soliak/CBC)

Stay Connected with CBC News

Mobile
 Facebook
 Podcasts
 Twitter
 Alerts
 Newsletter

ADVERTISEMENT

Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday	Sunday	Monday
16°C	17°C	12°C	0°C	5°C

More Weather |

Latest Manitoba News Headlines

- Winnipeg police confirm they use cellphone-snooping technology
- Gas prices leap 8 cents in Winnipeg
- 12 days, 309 vehicles passing buses: Selkirk school division tackling dangerous drivers
- Budget 2017 fails to deliver on innovation and efficiencies to tackle deficit
- Students take action against bullying on Pink Day in Manitoba

Must Watch

- Drivers dangerous pass buses with stop arms, red lights activated 0:50
Lord Selkirk School Division provided a video showing examples of drivers dangerously passing buses with their stop arms up.
- CKOM News Audio: MKO Grand Chief Sheila North Wilson says Manitoba has "the most racist provincial government in Canada"
1:28
Audio from CKOM News shows MKO Grand Chief Sheila North Wilson speak at the Federation of Sovereign Indigenous Nations health summit at Saskatoon's TCU Place, on Tuesday.

Top News Headlines

- 'Incredible honour': Education rights activist Malala Yousafzai receives honorary Canadian citizenship
- Ex-Mountie who abused son sentenced in Ottawa to 15 years in prison
- Russia accuses U.S. of unlawful attack against Syria
- 'No one should ever be mistreated this way,' apologetic United CEO says in TV interview
- Bank of Canada leaves key interest rate steady at 0.5%

Most Viewed

- No more tuition tax rebate, but more money for refugee housing coming in Manitoba budget
- Christine Wood was killed but body still missing, Winnipeg police say
- 'I'm too stressed': Brandon couple suing Winnipeg car dealership says trade-in left them out $28K
- 'Oh my God there's a child in that vehicle': Witness recalls coming across car on its side in watery ditch
- Man riding lawnmower with child on his lap dinged for drunk driving
- Woman arrested in killing of Wolseley neighbour
- Missing Manitoba woman Christine Wood's disappearance now a homicide
- Missing 34-year-old woman safely located: police
- 2017 Manitoba budget: Numerous jobs but no death blows

Special Coverage

- CBC Manitoba Team Investigates
CBC digs deeper on the stories of the day
- Manitoba government contemplates privatizing province-run air ambulances, water bombers
Confidential documents show PCs are interested in privatizing government's air services branch
- CBC Investigates
Structural weakness, coercion and duress: a condo project goes off the rails
Developer Legacy Homes did not comply with court order to do repairs on Riverside Glen development
- CBC Investigates
Engineers disciplined over condos with structural issues but public not informed
Disclosure on engineers' regulatory website follows questions by CBC News

Related Stories

- Numerous jobs but no death blows in Manitoba's 2017 budget
- Budget highlights: From tax credit reductions to new child care spaces
- 2017 Manitoba budget: Students, caregivers take tax hit but budget leaves most wallets unaffected
- Tuition tax credit cut says deficit 'on the backs of students'

Manitoba's latest budget comes with unpleasant surprises for the province's arts, culture and sports sectors, with program cuts totalling more than $3.5 million.

But Sport, Culture and Heritage Minister Rochelle Squires said it's just a "haircut" and no jobs will be lost or programs cut as a result of the decreases to several grant programs in Tuesday's budget.

"We are asking that they find the savings within," Squires said. "We are asking that they reduce their administrative costs."

The overall budget for sport, culture and heritage programs will decrease from $71.6 million to $68 million.

- More on the Manitoba budget
- Full coverage of the 2017 Manitoba budget

Cultural organizations will see $700,000 less this year in grants offered by the province — a decrease from $9.8 million budgeted in 2016-17 to $9.1 million in Tuesday's budget.

Meanwhile the provincial Arts Branch's grant assistance program will see about $200,000 less in the 2017-18 fiscal year, with its budget slashed from $4.3 million to $4.1 million in 2017-18.

An additional $300,000 is being cut from the branch's film and sound development program, which is now budgeted at $3.9 million, down from $4.2 million in 2016-17.

Arts groups have already cut administrators

Squires said letters have been sent to arts and cultural organizations such as the Manitoba Arts Council, asking them to find the savings from administrative costs, without any cuts to programming or front-line services.

But the Manitoba Arts Council, which will see nearly $200K in direct cuts, says they have already trimmed from their administration in the past year, leaving six positions unfilled after vacancies.

"We've already tightened the corset as much as we can tighten it," said Akoulina Connell, Arts Council CEO.

Akoulina Connell says the arts and culture sector has seen flat funding for years, something she says is tantamount to a cut each year. She says hearing that there will be even less money is disappointing. (Holly Caruk/CBC)

Connell says the arts and culture sector — "a growth sector for the province" — has seen flat funding for several years and the industry was hoping for an increase.

"It could have been much worse, [but] it doesn't cushion the blow for everyone in the arts sector," she said.

Minister Squires suggested organizations could cut from travel budgets without impacting services.

But Connell says MAC is already cutting costs with conference calls and are in the process of moving much of their grant application process online, but those changes aren't yet complete.

"We're moving from 54 programs to five programs, but there is a cost to implementing that change," said Connell.

In addition to the Arts Council, the Manitoba Centennial Centre Corporation and Manitoba Film and Music will be affected, a spokesperson for Squires said.

No word on Inuit Art Centre funding

Tuesday's budget does not mention any funding for the Winnipeg Art Gallery's Inuit Art Centre, which had received a $15-million commitment from the former NDP government in 2015.

- Manitoba announces \$15M for Inuit Art Centre at Winnipeg Art Gallery
- WAG Inuit Art Centre project gets \$5M boost from City of Winnipeg

On Tuesday, a government spokesperson told CBC News a decision has not been made regarding provincial funding for the centre, which has another $15 million committed by the federal government plus private donations.

The proposed Inuit Art Centre at the Winnipeg Art Gallery is seen in this artist's rendering. The provincial government says it has yet to make a decision on whether to proceed with funding the centre. (Rendering by Michael Maltzan Architecture)

Premier Brian Pallister said it's "disappointing" that his government has to re-examine some of the previous NDP government's funding commitments in a bid to slay the deficit.

He cited as another example the $6.7-million gymnasium upgrade project at Kelvin High School in Winnipeg, which will not be receiving provincial money that had been promised by the NDP in 2014.

- Kelvin school community fights for gym project funding

"There are so many worthwhile projects out there — and look, I'm going to put the Kelvin project in there — that people support and want to see go forward, and they've demonstrated that. But you can't say yes to everything or you're going to say no to the future for Manitoba, and you're going to say no to your children's future, too," Pallister said.

Film classification board to be cut

The budget also includes plans to eliminate Manitoba's film classification board in favour of using a ratings system established in British Columbia.

That move is expected to save the government $158,000 — half of the $316,000 it spent on board salaries and other expenses in the 2016-17 fiscal year.

Meanwhile, the province's public library services will have almost $100,000 cut from its grant assistance program with only $6.2 million being budgeted in this year compared to $6.3 million last year.

- Students, caregivers take tax hit but budget leaves most wallets unchanged
- Budget highlights: From tax credit reductions to new child care spaces

Funding for Sport Manitoba, a government agency that delivers all sport programming in the province, is also being cut from roughly $11.6 million to $11.4 million.

The province will be saving $1.2 million by not having to put money into the Sport Participation Fund, which was set up specifically for the 2017 Canada Games in Winnipeg.

Sport Manitoba has been directed to apply the budget decrease to its operating and salaries budget, not to any of its funding to any provincial sports organizations, the spokesperson for Squires said.

The budget is earmarking $68 million in overall investments in the sport, culture and heritage sectors, to be spent based on the PC government's return-on-investment analysis.

Budget 2017: Reaction and analysis 48:13

Report Typo or Error Send Feedback

To encourage thoughtful and respectful conversations, first and last names will appear with each submission to CBC/Radio-Canada's online communities (except in children and youth-oriented communities). Pseudonyms will no longer be permitted.

By submitting a comment, you accept that CBC has the right to reproduce and publish that comment in whole or in part, in any manner CBC chooses. Please note that CBC does not endorse the opinions expressed in comments. Comments on this story are moderated according to our Submission Guidelines. Comments are welcome while open. We reserve the right to close comments at any time.

Submission Policy

Note: The CBC does not necessarily endorse any of the views posted. By submitting your comments, you acknowledge that CBC has the right to reproduce, broadcast and publicize those comments or any part thereof in any manner whatsoever. Please note that comments are moderated and published according to our submission guidelines.

Explore CBC

CBC Home	Music	Documentaries	Digital Archives
TV	Life	Comedy	Games
Radio	Arts	Books	Contests
News	Kids	Parents	Site Map
Sports	Local	Indigenous

Stay Connected

Apps	RSS	Podcasts	Newsletters & Alerts
------	-----	----------	----------------------

Services and Information

Corporate Info	Reuse & Permission	CBC Shop	Jobs
Public Appearances	Terms of Use	Help	Doing Business with Us
Commercial Services	Privacy Policy	Contact Us	Renting Facilities